

Paris match

If you don't have one large artwork, make a statement by filling a space with a collection of smaller prints or photographs, which can be a random group or related, such as these black-and-white shots of Paris. To help get the position right, mark a rectangle with masking tape as a guide and hang your pictures within it.

Decorator's tips

- A group of frames should be in proportion to the size of the room – large frames or too many frames can dominate and overwhelm a small room.
- Maintain a similar distance between frames, but don't leave too much space. The gap between each frame should be more than 5cm and should not be wider than the width of the pictures themselves.
- Position the centre of the group at about eye level.
